

SUMMARY.

The Port has offered to negotiate for the Turkish Government, and several million have been arrested. A Bulgarian warship has captured a Turkish vessel laden with 5,000,000,000. A Greek destroyer has also captured a Turkish merchantman with a cargo of food. The London "Daily Telegraph" demands that the British Government should demand a constructive aerial programme. The British Government is considering Mr. White's scheme for a chain of air stations, particularly about the coast of Italy, and is spending half a million on dirigibles, balloons, and aeroplanes. The French Government has introduced a bill, providing for an expenditure of 100,000,000. In the naval debate in the House of Commons, Mr. Knowles said Australia alone was suffering. The Government has been asked to undertake to refrain from inflicting damage on the coast. The Government has been asked to undertake to refrain from inflicting damage on the coast. FARMER'S, SYDNEY. WHEN YOU ARE BUYING, REMEMBER ALWAYS QUALITY-VALUE-PRICE.

WHAT IS QUALITY? WHAT IS VALUE? WHAT IS PRICE? QUALITY-VALUE-PRICE. Three words in daily use among buyers and sellers, yet few people realize their full meaning and real significance. But a glance at their derivation will help us to appreciate their true importance. "QUALITY" FROM "QUALITAS" (Latin) - "TO BE STRONG," "TO BE WORTHY." "VALUE" FROM "VALERE" (Latin) - "TO BE ABLE TO APPRAISE," hence the value of a thing is its worth in the market, or the estimate of which something is a better or worse. And having analyzed that "Trinity of Commerce" let us see how we realize how it applies to the farmer. The farmer is a man of business, and he must realize that his product is only good if it is of the highest quality, and if it is of the highest quality, it will be of the highest value, and if it is of the highest value, it will be of the highest price. The farmer must realize that his product is only good if it is of the highest quality, and if it is of the highest quality, it will be of the highest value, and if it is of the highest value, it will be of the highest price.

FARMER'S DEPENDABLE QUALITIES. FARMER'S STERLING VALUES. FARMER'S LOWEST PRICES.

And, Quality for Price, Value for Value, and Price for Quality, the farmer's motto should be. The farmer must realize that his product is only good if it is of the highest quality, and if it is of the highest quality, it will be of the highest value, and if it is of the highest value, it will be of the highest price. Victims of Indigestion.

Victims of Indigestion have small choice between two evils--on the one hand a starvation diet, which means great weakness and depression of spirits, and on the other hand forcing themselves to take nourishment in spite of the acute suffering inflicted by each meal.

In the search for a cure they find common medicines upset the stomach and render the food more difficult to digest. Laxatives are violent and weakening, and so-called "pre-digested foods" merely evade the cause of the trouble and the stomach steadily grows weaker.

The common sense way of curing Indigestion is the Dr. Williams' way--the making of new, rich blood by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that gives tone to the weakened system and invigorates the distressed digestive organs. These pills have cured thousands of the worst cases of indigestion through their simple tonic treatment and one excellent example is shown in the following case:--

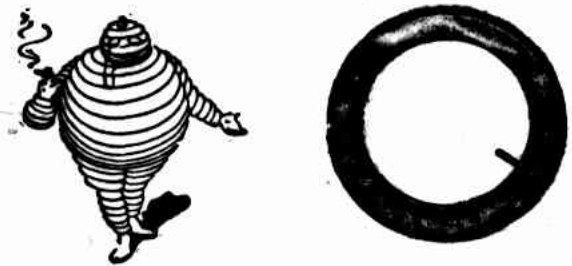

"I used to suffer acutely from indigestion," said Mr. Thomas E. Jordan, "Moonilla," Derby St., Watson's Bay, Sydney. "I'd hurry over my meals or perhaps not be able to get them regularly. I found at last everything I ate disagreed. For six weeks once I had to lie in bed and for months I couldn't take anything but light food, such as eggs and bread and milk. Directly a morsel was swallowed it lay like lead on my chest; I began to hate the thought of meal times, the smell of cooking would turn me. I'd get sick thumping headaches in my forehead and feel as sick and irritable as could be, for I couldn't enjoy a thing. My tongue was always coated and there was constantly a nasty taste in the mouth. Everything turned to gas and repeated on me. I tried all sorts of things but got no relief till I had a trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I can speak most highly of them for they acted splendidly. Before I took them, one mouthful of food made me feel as if I'd had a heavy meal, and my wife would try me with most appetising dishes all in vain, for I was not as taste or flavor. The first box eased off the weight in the chest and choked up feeling, and I began to fancy my food again. I kept on taking the pills and improved wonderfully in general condition all round, putting on flesh and getting a healthier color. They made me feel a different man and I would always rely on them."

Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Bloodlessness, Indigestion, Rheumatism and Nervous Complaints because they have cured these disorders. Price 2s. 9d. per box, six boxes 15s. 3d. of all dealers or from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. of Australasia, Ltd., Sydney.

Spare your Spares!

"It is too late to spare, when all is spent."--PROVERB.

Unless you protect your spares from sun, rain, friction, and sudden changes in temperature--so frequent in this country--they will be rendered worthless, even before the occasion for using them arises.

A cover should never be left uncovered--in wet weather or in dry. It stands to reason that a tyre which is constantly exposed to rain or even damp must soon begin to deteriorate. Strong sunlight is equally injurious, causing the best of rubber to harden, grow brittle, and lose its resiliency.

Use the
which effectually protects the cover, and can be quickly removed at will.

Opposition Tactics--"Pillions"--Letters from Mr. Roosevelt--Millions and the Death Duties.

WESTMINSTER, Jan. 24.

It is too soon to discuss the effect, beneficial or otherwise, of the Home Rule Bill, whose enactment the House of Lords will be able to defer for a period of two years. But the student of English political history unaffected by partisan prejudice, who falls on review of events happened within the past seven years to be struck by the singular infelicity of Unionist policy. To begin with, there was their determined opposition, voiced by the Marquis of Lansdowne in the House of Commons, and Mr. Balfour in the House of Lords, to the bold, statesmanlike action which permitted the Transvaal, lately rent by bitter intestine war, to manage its own affairs. The second grave blunder was the flight they made against the bestowal of old-age pensions. This was the more banal since the proposal emanated from their own side. It is true Mr. Chamberlain, having on the eve of a general election promised the boon, made no effort during the following years, when he and his party were in supreme power, to redeem the pledge. Nevertheless, it was in the circumstances awkward for the party of which he was the greatest asset, and which he had scheme with the help of the other side with plain intent to carry it. Discovery that the line taken on the opening of the second reading of the Old-age Pensions Bill was a mistake in tactics led to its withdrawal. But the party, a discredit not the least hurtful because the effort proved ineffectual.

It might reasonably have been thought that after this experience the Unionist leaders would have avoided the repetition of the error. In the Insurance Bill was brought in. This expectation was at the outset realized. Mr. Lloyd George's speech on introducing the measure was welcomed by quite unusual expressions of approbation from the Opposition. The provision most loudly applauded was that by which the multitudinous class benefited were required to contribute in comparatively small degree to building up the revenue necessary to the working of the bill. In this condition Unionists in and out of Parliament, in the press and on the platform, recognized a sound principle. It was left to a shrewd widely circulated London halfpenny morning paper to discover in it huge possibilities of snatching party profit. In a series of articles it stirred up the kitchen, the shop-counter, and the workshop to a pitch of seething revolt against a plundering Chancellor of the Exchequer and his accomplices in the Cabinet.

Contemporaries of the same colour taking the cue regardless of earlier declarations, flung themselves into the fray with such success that, as Mr. Lloyd George admitted, his jubilee speech the other day, there was a time when the bill was in serious peril. It rode out the storm, and, propped by equal bold seamanship and skilful steering, survived the tempest of the past thirty years, and is now safely in port. At recent by-elections Unionists won a seat or two by reckless misrepresentation of its objects. By the time the general election takes place the bill will have been in operation for a couple of years, and the balance is likely to be struck to the great discomfiture of the party who attempted to wreck it.

The Prime Minister's speech on the third reading of the Home Rule Bill was by common consent one of his greatest Parliamentary efforts. By odd accident it continues to be talked about chiefly in connection with his use of an unfamiliar word. When he spoke of Mr. Balfour's "reluctance" to connect the Transvaal with the self-government upon the Transvaal, members looked at each other in sharp surprise. How was the word spelled, and what did it mean? It should have been correctly produced in the newspaper reports published the next morning in one of the greatest triumphs of the press gallery. Characteristically, it is a word that had irresistible attraction for the Unionist. One can almost imagine he invented it. He used it in the phrase "like comet flies glaring angrily through murky confusion."

Again, in "Past Present," in his essay on Mirabeau, and in "Cromwell" he returns to it.

It is, indeed, a word rather fallen into disuse than new to literature. Examples of its use are found in Borelli's "Anatomy," Evelyn's "Diary," "Briarion Shandy," and "The Essays of Elia." It is derived from the Latin word for soot, fuligo. The dictionary definition is "pertaining to or resembling soot or smoke; sooty; dusky." In this sense it is scarcely appropriate to Mr. Balfour's attitude on the Transvaal question, which was neither dark nor dusky. On the contrary, it was unmistakably clear. I have vivid recollection of him, at the time leader of the Opposition, denouncing the policy as threatening the safety of the Empire, and with dramatic action wringing his hands in token that he washed them of all responsibility in the matter.

For the moment the strong personality of Mr. Roosevelt has retired into the background of American politics and public life. There is, however, a strong opinion in the United States that the Unionist is a temporary. Born in 1858 he is still young as statesmen's years are counted, and his bearing throughout the last Presidential election testified that he had the last nothing of his physical vigour, either intellectual or physical. The last mail brings me an interesting letter from him, bearing on this subject. "As for my political future," he writes, "I think the general English, I am sure, is likely to get into this fight at all, but I did not see how to avoid it; and having gone in there was nothing to do but to put it through. It was very bitter for me to see the Republican party, which I had put back on the Abraham Lincoln basis, in three years turned over to a combination of big financiers and unscrupulous political bosses. What the future of the Progressive party will be, nobody can say, but I am very confident that our principles, in some shape or other, will triumph. At present, however, I do not see how the party can triumph. It is necessary to have a certain interest in it, and I am a new man of sufficient power comes along."

The general English estimate alluded to in the letter was set forth in a quotation from your London letter of the 30th November, in which it is stated, "In this country it is generally taken for granted that with his defeat Mr. Roosevelt's career is closed, and that little more will be heard of him." Studying the letter the reader will probably not be able to discover tone or purpose tending in that direction. If the "new man of sufficient power" to recapture prominence for the Republican party does not "come along" Mr. Roosevelt, moved by patriotic impulse, will, doubtless, step into the breach. The Chancellor of the Exchequer will presently profit by another windfall in the shape of death duties, that princely legacy Sir William Harcourt bequeathed to the Treasury. It would be difficult to see how, save for this source of revenue, both ends of the national balance-sheet would be made to meet. With characteristic touch of grim humour, Sir William used to say that for his time it was he who financed the war in the Transvaal. The colossal cost of that undertaking was certainly one of the earliest purposes for whose accomplishment the death duties were indispensable. During the seven years they have been devoted to the amelioration of the lot of the working man and his family. It is the Costa family, already mentioned in the letter, who paid the million sterling. The proceeds sum was £400,000.

PROBLEM OF THE BALKANS.

THE DIPLOMATIC BATTLE OF THE NATIONS.

(BY CHARLIE SMYTH.)

THE crisis in the Balkan Peninsula has produced the most significant and, in the judgment of many leading authorities, the most critical situation that has arisen in European diplomacy since the Berlin Congress. The map of Europe will certainly be partly recast, and the relations of the Great Powers most probably materially modified. In the play of international interests, in the struggle on the one hand to realize the rewards of a triumphant campaign, and in the manoeuvres of the other hand to resist the erection of barriers to the eastward extension of projects, only one fact rises plainly from the imbroglio--that is, the evolution of a new power of almost first rank. Not since the Prussians, appearing before the states of Versailles has modern history in Europe recorded such a sudden and ominous manifestation of unsuspected might as the encampment of the Bulgarians before the lines of Teutonia. (The situation in the two besieged cities also offers a curious though not unnatural parallel.)

Is Bulgaria similarly destined to become the predominant partner in a confederation of kindred peoples that will disturb the equilibrium of the European states? There cannot, of course, be a political development in any measure analogous to the events which flowed from the Franco-Prussian war. But the political situation deriving from the Balkan alliance has modern history in Europe recorded such a sudden and ominous manifestation of unsuspected might as the encampment of the Bulgarians before the lines of Teutonia. (The situation in the two besieged cities also offers a curious though not unnatural parallel.)

In each case the Great Power that seems most likely to suffer is the same, namely, Russia. In fact, the long kindred sections are outside the confederation. As in 1871, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, and Baden, not to mention the Germans of Austria, were outside the "Norddeutscher Bund," so, outside the "Norddeutscher Bund," are the Czechs and Poles of Austria, and the Rumanians of Rumania.
